The image was most likely taken on the occasion of the opening of DUMILE's exhibition at Gallery 21, Johannesburg, on 12th June, 1967, and shows from left to right Cecil Skotnes who opened the exhibition, DUMILE, and Mme. FML Haenggi, one of the gallery's directors.

This image was probably the only one then available to ARTLOOK to support the news about DUMILE's recent departure from South Africa.
